
*A Special Event
for Campus Leaders*

Meeting with visiting scholar Marilee J. Bresciani, PhD

Wednesday, September 9, 2009

8:00 am - 9:45 am
Hawai'i Hall 309

How can student learning assessment be integrated into strategic planning and policy decisions?

How can campus leaders support student learning assessment?

What are other universities doing in terms of assessment?

Questions such as these will be the topic of conversation with Dr. Bresciani, Professor of Postsecondary Educational Leadership at San Diego State University and former Assistant Vice President for Institutional Assessment, Texas A&M, and Director of Assessment, NC State University.

As a faculty member, former administrator and director, she understands the importance of strong leadership if assessment is to take hold. She has more than 21 years experience in academic and administrative program assessment, course-embedded assessment, and institutional research. She earned her Ph.D. in Administration, Curriculum, and Instruction from the University of Nebraska. She is the author of Techniques for Assessing Student Learning and Development: A Handbook for Practitioners and has published numerous articles and chapters on assessment in higher education.
