Dear all,

I am a PhD researcher at Birkbeck University of London and I am investigating how people who do understand Chinese and people who do not understand Chinese perceive the emotional state of a Chinese speaker.

I would be very grateful if you could spend around 15 minutes to fill in this survey online (preferably on your computer, but you can also complete it on your smartphone or tablet). In 12 different recordings, you will hear and/or see a Chinese man speaking and will have to indicate how you think he is feeling in each recording. The survey is available in English, in simplified Chinese, and in traditional Chinese. You can access it either via the web-link or by scanning the QR code below.

Many thanks in advance for your valuable contribution. Do not hesitate to share this with anyone, be they Chinese speakers or not. I am looking for participants with as many different profiles as possible (various linguistic and cultural backgrounds), so absolutely anyone can participate (except people with diagnosed autism or alexithymia and people under the age of 18).

English version

Simplified Chinese version

Traditional Chinese version

Thank you,

Pernelle Lorette
p.lorette@mail.bbk.ac.uk