HON 340 The Publication Process
Focuses: E (Ethics) & WI (Writing Intensive)
Online, Wednesday 12pm-1:15pm
Instructor: Dr. Jayme Scally
Using Horizons undergraduate journal as our guide, this course engages the experiential learning done through the publication process and on the myriad ethical issues arising from publication in academia and beyond. To understand the publishing environment, we will review the current norms and expectations across a variety of disciplines, discussing ethical issues including expectations for communicating academic work, open access publishing, data validity, and more.

We will engage in the actual process of publication in working on Horizons. Serving as the Student Editorial Board, alongside the professor (the Editor of the journal), students will solicit contributions, review submissions, guide authors through the revision process, and engage with University of Hawaiʻi Press to compile the final submission for publication. We will also focus on communication, focusing on writing for a particular audience and on providing feedback to peers on their own writing.

This course has Contemporary Ethical Issues (E) and Writing Intensive (WI) Focus designation.
