In January of 1920 a large group of partisans under the command of Yakov Triapitsyn entered the town of Nikolaevsk-on-Amur and eventually killed many Japanese military personnel, and residents of the town. When they left, they set fire to the town and most of it was destroyed. The album shows a few before photos, but the majority are of the destruction. Ivan Ivanovich Stakheev (1869-?) was the son of Ivan Grigor'evich Stakheev. The family trading business began in the 19th century with stores throughout Russia. Ivan and his brother Dmitrii emigrated to France in 1918.

Title changes to: Kalendar al'manakh Mitla na .... rik = Anuario de la revista ucraniana de humor y satira "La Escoba" para el ano.... Buenos Aires: Vyd-vo I. Serediaka.

Acquired years 1952, 1953, 1957, 1958, 1959, 1960, 1961, 1962, 1963, 1965, 1970.

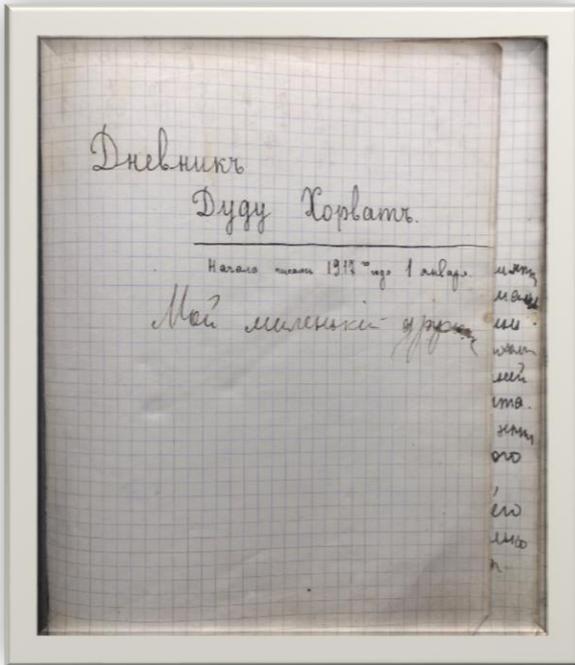

Dealer's description:

Scarce Ukrainian satirical almanac whose name means "The Broom" was issued in Buenos Aires by Julian Serediak. Like most Russian and Ukrainian satirical journals, its orientation was fiercely anti-communist, although this yearly anthology also contains light-hearted prose and poetry, as well as non-political caricatures and satire. Several issues have advertisements of Ukrainian businesses in South America.

KHORVAT, Evdokiia
Dmitrievna (1902-2005)

Manuscript Diary 1917-
1920 covering Kharbin
/Tsing-tao/Vladivostok.

89 pp. of written text plus
8 pp of separate letters.

From dealer's description:

The personal diary of Evdokiia Dmitrievna Khorvat, written between 1 January 1917 and circa July 1920. This manuscript diary provides a fascinating insight into the travails and concerns of a young lady from an important military family during one of the most turbulent periods in Russian history. Evdokiia's father was Dmitrii Leonidovich Khorvat (1859-1937) who was a Russian military engineer.

In 1902 he was appointed to head the construction of the Chinese Eastern Railway based in Harbin. In 1920 the Khorvat family moved to Peking. There Evdokiia met a young British airman, Cecil Lewis and they were married in 1921. Lewis became one of the founders of the BBC. The marriage dissolved in 1940. Evdokiia was born in St. Petersburg, the second of six children. She died in London in 2005.

Two additional LARGO Albums.....

The first two albums were described in the Report for July to Sept. 2018.

Recently, the dealer notified us that the family still had two albums left. While most of the photos have been removed, there are roughly 138 photos in the two albums.

Igor Efimovich Sychev (1913-2002) was a well-known caricaturist for Krokodil. Igor spent his young years in Shanghai, because his father was a White Guard officer who had fled to Manchuria. Sychev (his pen-name was Igos) in his young years was an acrobat in two trios “Kobra” and “Largo” and a ballet dancer. He also was a costume and make-up designer. He left China in 1947 and went to USSR. These two albums cover only China.

Posutā no riron to hōhō [Poster theory and method].

Izuo, Arai and Ikebe Yoshiatsu

Tokio: Atoriesha [Atelier Sha], Shōwa 7, [1932]. Octavo (22.7 × 16.1 cm). Publisher's printed boards (in Japanese and Russian); 52 pp. of reproductions depicting 72 posters, of which four in color on separate pages.

A Japanese survey of modern poster art and its key tendencies, with special focus on the Soviet political poster. The numerous illustrations emphasize modernist aesthetics, especially Constructivism and Bauhaus. Published in Japan during the first Soviet five-year plan (1928–1932), an ambitious industrial modernization campaign, five-year plan posters are especially well represented among the examples. Curiously, these are shown alongside German, French, British, and American posters advertising consumer goods such as coffee and Shell Oil, as well as luxury experiences such as cruises along the French Riviera. A number of contemporary Japanese posters reflecting the modernist tendencies follow the Western examples. Photomontage is also of special interest, with striking photomontage poster compositions for Dziga Vertov's films "The Man With the Movie Camera" and "Eleventh Year" and political posters by Gustav Klutssis. Finally, several pages of illustrations show ways in which public spaces were used for slogans and advertising in the Soviet Union and in the West.

[MAP OF NORTH MANCHURIA]

gradient tints. In Chinese. A huge colorful map printed at the beginning of the Chinese Civil War under control of the Chinese Eastern Railway Economic Survey Bureau. The map displays the territory of Manchuria where foreign influence predominated. The core object of this map is the Chinese Eastern Railway which resulted in a clash of interests between China and the Soviet Union. Past agreements were broken by Chiang Kai-shek who began operations against the communists in 1927. The railways are indicated in Manchuria, Japan, Korea and a part of the USSR. The sea routes are only on the smaller-scale map
